In response to the president's housing-reform proposals today, Karen Shaw Petrou, managing partner of Federal Financial Analytics, provides the following comment:

“Key to action here is how serious the Administration is about the affordable-housing proposals. If these are non-negotiable, housing reform will flounder. If, however, the White House gives ground on the most controversial aspects of its most comprehensive plan, it will prove a sound platform for substantive action in the next few months.”
