It's Not Over ...

Or maybe it is, but not everyone has heard. Earlier this week, Rep. Andrew Ogles (R-TN) introduced H. R. 5549 to require Treasury to give Congress a complete plan to end the GSEs' conservatorship. Our forecast: don't wait up. Our observation: it's interesting that a conservative freshman hasn't given up even though there's no sign that his leadership has any interest reviving this idea. This is far too early and far too little to suggest a leading indicator to renewed Republican interest in tackling the GSEs now that Pat Toomey is gone from the Senate, but it's noteworthy nonetheless.
